The Honorable Jesse Helms
Chairman, Committee on Foreign Relations
United States Senate

Dear Mr. Chairman:

As you requested, we have tabulated total U.S. contributions to international organizations and programs (that is, intergovernmental bodies having three or more members) from fiscal year 1993 to 1995, exclusive of peacekeeping contributions. We also identified which U.S. agencies expended these funds and how much each agency spent in those years.

Your request resulted from your concern about the lack of clarity regarding how much the U.S. government was providing in total to international organizations and programs and which agencies were providing these funds.

Background

U.S. contributions to international organizations and programs are classified as either “assessed” or “voluntary.” Assessed contributions are considered obligations that member states agree to pay when joining an international organization. Voluntary contributions are often made by various U.S. government agencies to support a specific program or activity conducted by an international organization. In some instances, organizations receive both assessed and voluntary contributions from the United States. According to the Department of State, the multilateral institutions to which the United States contributes and in which it participates generally help ensure that U.S. interests are fairly and equitably considered in international forums. They also help guarantee that the United States has access to vital public health, transportation safety, and other information.

Results in Brief

For fiscal years 1993 to 1995, the United States contributed approximately $6.3 billion to 130 international organizations and programs—around $2 billion each year. As shown in table 1, this amount includes about $2.7 billion in assessed and about $3.6 billion in voluntary contributions.

Table 1: U.S. Contributions to International Organizations and Programs, Fiscal Years 1993-95

Voluntary	1.188	1.233	1.216	3.637	2.4
Total	$2.101	$2.096	$2.098	$6.295	-0.1

Note: Numbers have been rounded and are in nominal (unadjusted) terms.

The Department of State expended the largest amount of these funds (about $5.2 billion), with the U.S. Agency for International Development (USAID) spending the second largest total ($1.1 billion). Other agencies that spent large amounts of funds included the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), the Department of Commerce, and the Department of Agriculture (USDA).

For fiscal years 1993-95, appendix I provides details on the international organizations and programs that received U.S. assessed contributions. Appendix II provides details of the recipients receiving U.S. voluntary contributions. Appendix III details the recipients of both U.S. voluntary and assessed contributions. Appendix IV specifies the amounts of contributions paid by U.S. federal agencies and departments.

How Assessed and Voluntary Contributions Were Distributed

Assessed Contributions

Of the approximately $6.3 billion in assessed and voluntary contributions in fiscal years 1993-95, about $2.7 billion, or 42 percent, came from funds appropriated by Congress specifically for assessed contributions to 68 international organizations and programs; this amount was paid by the Department of State. As table 1 indicates, during the period assessed contributions decreased 3.4 percent, from $913 million to $882 million. As shown in appendix I, about 98.4 percent of U.S. assessed contributions were paid to 20 recipient organizations or programs (see table I.1). The remaining 48 other organizations and programs received about 1.6 percent of U.S. assessed contributions.

Assessed contributions declined for 18 international organizations and programs from fiscal year 1993 to 1995. The most noteworthy decrease in payments of assessed contributions was assumed by the U.N. Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO). FAO received $19.6 million less in fiscal year 1995 than it did in fiscal year 1993, a decrease of nearly 20 percent. During the same period, payments of assessed contributions to the United Nations decreased $54 million, or 17.3 percent. Lower payments of assessed contributions to these two organizations accounted for 96 percent of the decreases in funds from U.S. assessed contributions during fiscal years 1993 and 1995. According to the Department of State, this decline occurred because in fiscal year 1993, the United States made substantial arrears payments to both organizations in addition to the annual assessed contributions, whereas in fiscal year 1995, similar arrears were not paid.

On the other hand, payments of assessed contributions to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization (NATO) increased nearly 40 percent, or $10.7 million, between fiscal year 1993 and 1995. The Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD) saw its funds increased by 17.5 percent, or $8.9 million, from assessed contributions in those same fiscal years.

Voluntary Contributions

As shown in table 1, about $3.6 billion, or 58 percent, of the approximately $6.3 billion in total contributions was paid through voluntary contributions to international organizations and programs in fiscal years 1993-95. During that period, voluntary contributions increased from about $1.19 billion to about $1.21 billion, or 2.4 percent. As shown in appendix II, 20 international organizations and programs received on average 95 percent of the U.S. voluntary contributions between fiscal year 1993 and 1995 (see table II.7).

The most noteworthy decrease in payments of U.S. voluntary contributions was to the International Organization for Migration, which received about $68.7 million less in fiscal year 1995 than it did in fiscal year 1993, a decrease of 86.86 percent. On the other hand, the United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA) received a 141.38-percent increase, or $20 million, in U.S. voluntary contributions during those same years (see table II.7).¹

U.S. Agencies' Funding of International Organizations and Programs

Of the total amount paid for these fiscal years, about $5.2 billion was from State's appropriations ($2.7 billion in assessed and $2.5 billion in voluntary contributions). Other voluntary contributions included about $1.09 billion from USAID, about $8.8 million from HHS, about $3.6 million from the Department of Commerce, and about $3.7 million from USDA. Ten other federal agencies and departments paid about $13.2 million in voluntary contributions.

Contributions supporting U.S. participation in international organizations and programs are administered primarily by the Department of State or USAID. All assessed contributions are paid by the State Department; however, voluntary contributions may be paid by State and other executive agencies. For example, U.S. assessed contributions paid to FAO come from State, with voluntary contributions funded by USAID and USDA.

Agency Comments

The Departments of State and Interior and USAID provided written comments on a draft of this report. The other agencies covered in this report provided specific technical suggestions and observations to improve the clarity and accuracy of the draft. We have incorporated these changes in the report where appropriate. Agency comments are reprinted in their entirety in appendixes V through VII.

Scope and Methodology

We designed a data collection instrument to obtain information on all U.S. assessed and voluntary contributions to international organizations and programs. We distributed the data collection instrument to 15 executive departments and agencies.² These departments have the responsibility to fund or have historically voluntarily funded international organizations and programs.

Next, we used the data collected to develop tables to describe the agency contributions to the 130 international organizations and programs. While ¹This reflects a 1993 executive branch decision to remove any conditions on assistance for family planning that are not explicitly prohibited by the Foreign Assistance Act of 1961 or any other law. Prior to 1993, these conditions had rendered UNFPA ineligible for U.S. funds because of UNFPA's support for the Chinese government's family planning program.

²EPA, USAID, USA, and the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Education, Energy, HHS, Housing and Urban Development, Interior, Justice, Labor, State, Transportation, and the Treasury.

tabulating the contributions made to the United Nations, we consolidated a number of small contributions made to various programs and offices of the United Nations into one total for the U.N. Secretariat.³ We did not independently verify the data submitted in our data collection instrument; however, we did reconcile the contribution expenditures with published sources and verified the accuracy of the numbers in our database against the data submitted to us. We also reviewed our analysis of the data with agency officials to help further ensure the accuracy of our computations.

To compute information on assessed contributions, we used the State Department's annual reports to Congress for U.S. contributions to international organizations and programs. As agreed with your staff, we did not collect data on contributions to international financial institutions or contributions that related to peacekeeping operations.

All reporting agencies provided expenditure data except USAID, which provided obligation data, along with the formula it uses to convert the obligations into estimated amounts expended for the contributions.

We conducted our review between November 1995 and October 1996 in accordance with generally accepted government auditing standards.

We are sending copies of this report to the Environmental Protection Agency; USAID; the U.S. Information Agency; and the Departments of Agriculture, Commerce, Education, Energy, HHS, Housing and Urban Development, Interior, Justice, Labor, State, Transportation, and the Treasury.

³The programs and offices consolidated included the U.N. Afghanistan Emergency Trust Fund, the U.N. Capital Development Fund, the U.N. HABITAT, the U.N. Trust Fund for Women, the U.N. Trust Fund for South Africa, the U.N. Volunteer Fund for Victims of Torture, the U.N. Volunteers, the U.N. Fellowship Program, and the U.N. Guatemalan Peace Process.

Please contact me at (202) 512-4128 if you or your staff have any questions concerning this report. Major contributors to this report were LeRoy Richardson, Elizabeth Nyang, Claude Adrien, and Stanley Kostyla.

Sincerely yours,

On behalf of Secretary Babbitt, thank you for the opportunity to review the draft report on U.S. voluntary and assessed contributions to international organizations and programs for fiscal years 1993 through 1995 (GAO code 711158).

We have reviewed the report and have no substantive comments to the text, but did in the course of our review, find an additional amount of money that should be included in the report. For fiscal year 1995, please add $33,700 as a voluntary contribution from Interior (National Park Service) to the World Heritage Convention (United Nations Education Science and Cultural Organization). Please contact Rudy D'Alessandro, (202) 219-0537, in our International Affairs Office, with any questions or if you require any further clarification.

Sincerely,
